1. Introduction

1.1 This document summarises the Registrar General's mid-2004 estimates of the population of Scotland and its administrative areas. Data are given for council and health board areas. Some relevant historical information and a table giving land areas and population densities are also presented.

2. The Population of Scotland

2.1 The estimated population of Scotland on 30 June 2004 was 5,078,400, a rise of 21,000 on the previous year and an increase of 23,600 since mid-2002. In the twelve months to mid-2004, there was a net migration gain of around 26,000, reflecting a net gain of around 15,500 from the rest of the UK, a net gain of around 11,700 from overseas (including asylum seekers) and an adjustment of -1,500 for unmeasured migration (see the notes and definitions section for more details). Other changes, including changes in the prison population, movements to and from the armed forces, and changes in the number of armed forces stationed in Scotland amounted to a net loss of around 1,000 people. Over the year, there were just over 57,500 deaths which, as in recent years, exceeded the number of births (by about 4,000 in mid-2004).

2.2 The population increased for the second year in a row because more people came to Scotland than left. Around 61,900 people came to Scotland from England, Wales and Northern Ireland and around 46,400 people left Scotland to go to England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The slightly lower overseas net gain comes from an inflow of around 36,300 people (including asylum seekers) and an outflow of around 24,600 people.

2.3 For comparison purposes it is better to look at a time frame longer than one year, as population change tends to fluctuate from year to year, particularly for smaller areas. Since the 2001 Census, Scotland's population has increased by 0.3 per cent (+14,200) from 5.06 million to 5.08 million (Table 5). However, over the last ten years, Scotland's population has decreased by around 24,000 (-0.5%): 5.1 million to 5.08 million (Table 6). The main reason for the decrease is the excess of deaths over births (31,754). Despite the small increase in Scotland's population since the 2001 Census, it is not clear whether recent increases in births and people migrating to Scotland will change Scotland's long-term trend of a declining and ageing population.

3. Age and Sex Structure of the Population

3.1 The age/sex composition is one of the most important aspects of the population, as changes in different age groups will have different social and economic impacts. For example, increases in the elderly population are likely to place a greater demand on health and social services. Scotland's estimated population is shown by age and sex in Table 1 and Figure 1.

3.2 In mid-2004, there were more females (52 per cent) than males (48 per cent) in Scotland. The average age was 38 years for males and 41 years for females (Table 7). Twenty per cent of males were under 16 years old compared with 17 per cent of females, while 67 per cent of males and 59 per cent of females were of working age.

3.4 Among older people, particularly over 75, the higher number of females reflects the longer expectation of life for women, partly as a result of higher rates of male mortality during the Second World War. The effects of a 'flu epidemic in 1922 and lower levels of fertility during the First World War are also evident, as seen in the sharp decline in the population aged over 80.

3.5 The changing age structure of the population since 1994 is illustrated in Figure 2. Of particular note is the decrease of 10 per cent in the number of children under 15 and the increase of 16 per cent in the numbers aged 75 and over. The ageing of the population is evident in the rise of the 45-59 age group (13 per cent) and the fall in the 15-29 age group (13 per cent).

4. Administrative Areas

4.1 Population Change 2003-2004

4.1.1 Population estimates for each council and health board area, together with details of the components of population change (births, deaths, net migration and other changes) for the period mid-2003 to mid-2004, are shown in Table 2, Table 3 and Table 4.

4.1.2 Amongst the council areas, Aberdeenshire (+1.2 per cent; +2,790), City of Edinburgh (+1.2 per cent; +5,300) and Clackmannanshire (+1.2 per cent; +560) had the largest percentage increase. Aberdeen City (-0.9 per cent; -1,780), Dundee City (-0.8 per cent; -1,080) and Inverclyde (-0.7 per cent; -620) experienced the largest percentage decreases.

4.1.3 Of the health board areas, Highland (+1.1 per cent; +2,260), Lothian (+1.0; +7,494) and Orkney (+1.0; +190) had the largest percentage increases. The only health board with a decrease was Argyll & Clyde (-0.3 per cent; -1,352).

4.2 Population Change 1994-2004

4.2.1 Details of population changes between 1994 and 2004 for administrative areas are shown in Table 6. Eilean Siar (-9.8 per cent; -2,860), Inverclyde (-7.7 per cent; -6,890) and Dundee City (-6.6 per cent; -10,030) show the greatest percentage decreases for council areas. The largest absolute reduction in numbers was for Glasgow City (-34,590). West Lothian (+10.6 per cent; +15,590), East Lothian (+6.6 per cent; +5,680) and Stirling (+5.4 per cent; +4,390) show the greatest percentage increases.

4.2.2 The greatest percentage decrease in population among health board areas was Western Isles (-9.8 per cent; -2,860) and the largest percentage increase was in Lothian (+4.7 per cent; +35,174).

4.3 Sex and Age Structure of Administrative Areas in Scotland

4.3.1 There are more females than males in Scotland in mid-2004 and this is the case for all council areas except Shetland Islands and Moray. This is shown in Table 7, where the "sex ratio" (the male population divided by the female population) is greater than one.

4.3.2 Though the pattern of age distribution is complex, some general themes are discernible from Table 7. The major cities have the highest proportions of males and females of working age, for example City of Edinburgh (71 per cent of males; 64 per cent of females) and Glasgow City (69 per cent of males; 62 per cent of females). The highest proportions of people of pensionable age tend to be found in more rural areas such as Dumfries & Galloway (males 18 per cent; females 29 per cent), Eilean Siar (males 17 per cent; females 29 per cent) and Scottish Borders (males 17 per cent; females 27 per cent).

5. Population Density

5.1 Information on land areas and population densities is shown in Table 8. Population density ranges from 8 persons per square kilometre in Highland to 3,292 persons per square kilometre in Glasgow City.

6. Notes and Definitions

Population Covered

The estimated population of an area includes all those usually resident there, whatever their nationality. Students are treated as being resident at their term-time address. Members of UK and non-UK armed forces stationed in Scotland are included; UK forces stationed outside Scotland are excluded.

Age

Population figures relate to 30 June of the year shown and ages relate to age last birthday.

Presentation of Results

Although the populations are tabulated in units, this does not imply accuracy to that level. The data are presented in units for the convenience of users wishing to compile non-standard aggregations without encountering rounding problems.

Administrative Areas

The composition of the health board areas in terms of council areas is summarised in the table below:

Composition of health board areas

Health board area	Council area
Argyll & Clyde	Argyll & Bute, East Renfrewshire (part), Inverclyde, Renfrewshire, West Dunbartonshire (part), Stirling (part)
Ayrshire & Arran	East Ayrshire, North Ayrshire, South Ayrshire
Borders	Scottish Borders
Dumfries & Galloway	Dumfries & Galloway
Fife	Fife (part)
Forth Valley	Clackmannanshire, Falkirk (part), Stirling (part), Perth & Kinross (part)
Grampian	Aberdeen City, Aberdeenshire, Moray
Greater Glasgow	East Dunbartonshire, East Renfrewshire (part), Glasgow City, North Lanarkshire (part), South Lanarkshire (part), West Dunbartonshire (part)
Highland	Highland
Lanarkshire	North Lanarkshire (part), South Lanarkshire (part), west Lothian (part), Falkirk (part)
Lothian	East Lothian, City of Edinburgh, Midlothian, West Lothian (part), Falkirk (part)
Orkney	Orkney Islands
Shetland	Shetland Islands
Tayside	Angus, Dundee City, Perth & Kinross (part)
Western Isles	Eilean Siar

*Note: In practice there are some other very small "slivers" where health board and council area boundaries cross.

Land Area

The land areas used to calculate the population density information presented in Table 7 were derived from digital boundaries used for the 2001 Census.

Migration Data Sources

Migration is the most difficult component of population change to estimate. The other components (births and deaths) are estimated using data from the civil registration system, which is considered to be virtually complete. In contrast, there is no comprehensive system which registers migration in the UK - either moves to or from the rest of the world, or moves within the UK. Estimates of migration therefore have to be based on survey data and the best proxy data that exist.

Migration is derived from three key sources of data. The National Health Service Central Register (NHSCR) for moves between health board areas within the UK, with migration at council area level within Scotland estimated using anonymised data from the Community Health Index (CHI). The International Passenger Survey (IPS) provides information on moves into and out of Scotland from outside the UK.

The NHSCR system records the movements of patients between NHS health board areas in the UK. Each time a patient transfers to a new NHS doctor in a different health board area, the NHSCR is notified and then the patient is considered to have made a migrant move. Counts of these re-registrations are used as a proxy indicator for moves within the UK.

The CHI holds records of people registered with an NHS doctor in Scotland. Unlike the NHSCR, the records provided to GROS contain the postcode of the patient's address, which enables migration to be estimated for councils, and potentially for smaller areas. The approach used for estimating council-level migration involves matching CHI patient records which are extracted from a database which reflects the 'live' CHI system on two occasions one year apart.

This matching of two extracts, say A and B, will create three sets of patients:

- set of patients in extract A and extract B
- set of patients in extract A but not in extract B
- set of patients in extract B but not in extract A.

The set of patients in both extracts whose postcodes were not the same in each extract can be considered as those within-Scotland migrants who moved from one address in Scotland to another within Scotland between the dates of the two extracts. The remaining two sets of patients are either migrants to or from Scotland; babies born between the two extracts; deaths between the dates of the two extracts; movements to or from the Armed Forces; and a small number of records that are for the same patient but have different CHI numbers because they could not be matched when the GP registration was processed.

Currently, GROS migration data derived from the NHSCR is considered to be the most reliable data available at health board level, so estimates from the CHI are controlled to ensure that they are consistent with the NHSCR data for moves across a health board boundary by origin, destination, age and sex.

The International Passenger Survey (IPS) is a continuous sample survey conducted by the Office for National Statistics at the principal air, sea and Channel Tunnel routes between the UK and countries outside the British Isles. The sample of migrants contacted within the survey is small, particularly for Scottish migrants (approx 120 survey contacts during 2002), and therefore estimates derived from the IPS are subject to larger sampling and non-sampling errors, and are considered less reliable than UK-level estimates. Information about the country of origin and destination, and age of migrants is particularly subject to error. In addition to IPS data, additional information is received on migrants to and from the Republic of Ireland, asylum seekers and visitor switchers.¹

International Migration

Under National Statistics arrangements there is a commitment to carrying out a programme of thorough reviews of key outputs, at least every five years. A quality review of International Migration was recently undertaken by the Office of National Statistics and the final report published in September 2003.

The review's scope included all forms of migration between the UK and the rest of the world. National Statistics outputs covered by the review included both statistics relating to all migrants, and statistics relating only to those non-citizen migrants who are subject to UK immigration control. Geographical and legal aspects of migration were covered, including for immigrants, their countries of origin, routes of entry and UK destination, and for emigrants, place of last UK residence, citizenship, legal residence status and duration of stay in the UK. Also in the review's scope were demographic, social and economic characteristics of migrants.

The review highlighted opportunities to develop and make better use of existing sources, and to develop and prepare for the exploitation of potential new sources. The review made nineteen recommendations in the broad areas of:

- Development of better estimates of total migration flows
- Expanded use of existing survey and administrative data sources for UK geography of migration
- Use and development of survey and administrative data sources on persons subject to immigration control
- New administrative sources

An implementation plan for the quality review was published in January 2004 (www.statistics.gov.uk/methods_quality/quality_review/downloads/final_implementation_plan_nsgronim.doc), and since then there have been a number of improvements made to the design of the IPS, including the addition of questions on intentions. There are also plans to extend fieldwork hours, to conduct a port survey of emigrants and to carry out research into non-responders to the IPS. Research is also underway comparing the distribution of immigrants in a number of sources.

Estimates of total international migration into Scotland are published by the Office for National Statistics. The ONS estimates use a consistent methodology based primarily on the IPS to allocate migration to Scotland. The methodology is currently under review as part of the quality review, and in the meantime, a slightly different methodology is used for the purposes of population estimates in Scotland.

¹ Visitor switchers are visitors who enter or leave the UK intending to stay in the destination country for less than a year, but who actually stay for a year or longer.

Unmeasured Migration

The results of the 2001 Census indicated that the previously published 2000 mid-year estimates had been overestimated by some 50,000 as a result of cumulative errors in estimating migration (mostly by young men) during the 1980s and 1990s. As a result, the migration estimates for 1982-2000 were revised. It is likely that these migration errors are the result of an underestimation of young male migration from Scotland to the rest of the world during this period, but if moves from Scotland to the rest of the UK have been under-recorded, the implied increase in overseas migration would be less.

To ensure that migration estimates do not continue to be overestimated, an adjustment was included in the 2002 and 2003 mid-year estimates. The estimated civilian migration component included an adjustment for unmeasured migration. At the Scotland level, this amounted to an outflow of -2,600. Further investigation has shown that this adjustment should be -1,500. This element of unmeasured migration will be looked at again in conjunction with other development work on migration. Progress on work undertaken to review the quality of the method and data sources used to estimate migration have shown that the level of unmeasured migration should be reduced to -1,500. Further work will make it possible to provide historic estimates of flows between Scotland and the rest of the UK, and with overseas consistent with the revised population estimates. More information on the cumulative migration error since 1981 can be found in the GROS paper "Comparison with Previous Estimates and Implications for Revisions" on the GROS website through the following link [<http://www.gro-scotland.gov.uk/files/compest.pdf>] or by contacting GROS Customer Services.

NATIONAL STATISTICS This is a National Statistics publication. It has been produced to high professional standards set out in the National Statistics Code of Practice and Release Practice Protocol (http://www.statistics.gov.uk/about_ns/cop/default.asp). These statistics undergo regular quality assurance reviews to ensure that they meet customer needs. They are produced free from any political interference.

THE GENERAL REGISTER OFFICE FOR SCOTLAND (GROS) GROS is the department of the devolved Scottish Administration responsible for the registration of births, marriages, civil partnerships, deaths, divorces and adoptions in Scotland. We are responsible for the Census of Population in Scotland which we use, with other sources of information, to produce population and household statistics. We make available important information for family history. Our website is www.gro-scotland.gov.uk.

OTHER GROS STATISTICS Further detailed statistics produced by GROS are available from the statistics pages of the GROS website (<http://www.gro-scotland.gov.uk/statistics/index.html>). Statistics from the 2001 Census are on the Scotland's Census Results On-Line website (www.scrol.gov.uk) and on the Census section of the main website (<http://www.gro-scotland.gov.uk/census/index.html>).

Information about future publications is provided on the GROS website (<http://www.groscotland.gov.uk/futurepb.html>). If you would like to receive notification of forthcoming statistical publications, you can register your interest on the Scottish Executive ScotStat web site at www.scotland.gov.uk/Topics/Statistics/scotstat/Intro.
